batty. He clicks his false teeth when he reads reports or does figuring. Sometimes, during a conversation on the phone, when he's waiting for a long-distance connection he'll start those teeth going. It's enough to make a person blow his top.

Several of us in the office have discussed this and we are unable to decide what to do. One girl quit a few months ago because she said she was afraid she'd explode and tell him to his face. Please don't think this is a joke. We are in dead earnest and need advice. —Raw Nerves.

Dear Raw Nerves: This man has no idea that he is pushing all of you to "the brink." No one would knowingly click his store-choppers and advertise the fact that he has 32 paid assistants in his mouth.

A well worded (but gentle) note should be placed on the gentleman's desk telling him his habit is annoying to his colleagues. It should be signed "All of us." The chances are excellent that if he knew he'd see his dentist about an adjustment which he has probably needed for some time.

To learn the difference between a marriage that "stiles down" and one that "gets dull," send for ANN LANDERS' booklet, "What to Expect From Marriage," enclosing with your request 20 cents in coin and a large, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

(Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope.)
